

Caribbean wedding venues that wow

Melanie Reffes, Special for USA TODAY 7:13 p.m. EST January 30, 2014

Getting married in a swamp might not be every couple's idea of "happily ever after" unless it's at the Caroni Bird Sanctuary on the west coast of Trinidad.

Jim Stephens

Most Caribbean weddings are pretty memorable. But getting creative beyond a sunset ceremony on the beach comes with pretty good odds that you'll never forget your anniversary. Whether it's the first time down the aisle or vow renewals, Valentine's Day is the perfect time to plan a heart-pumping new beginning with guaranteed bragging rights once you get back home.

Green matters: Trinidad

Getting married in a swamp might not be every couple's idea of "happily ever after" unless it's at the Caroni Bird Sanctuary on the west coast of the island. Where the Caroni River meets the Gulf of Paria, nearly newlyweds make it legal aboard a jetty as it skims the mangroves past hundreds of scarlet ibis flitting about the trees. For couples looking to party hearty after the ceremony, Carnival runs from March 3 to 4. caronibirdsanctuary.com